As Starving Nations Hope, And World

Food Situation Grows Worse, Hoover Warns Of—

'GREATEST CRISIS EVER FACED BY HUMANITY'

BY OUR DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT

THE world food situation today is the greatest crisis ever faced by humanity. This grave view of a problem now exercising and worrying the minds of United Nations statesmen was expressed last night at Cairo by Herbert Hoover, on the eve of his departure for India on his world food survey for President Truman.

Hoover's opinion was echoed throughout the capitals of the world. LONDON, while withholding official comment on the situation, was known to have the problem under constant Cabinet review.

WASHINGTON, the city to which the hungry millions of the world are looking for aid, announced last night that Wallace, U.S. Secretary of Commerce, is launching, on May 12, a drive for the shipment of relief supplies overseas.

Commenting on the drive, Mr. Wallace declared that "upon the generosity and compassion of the American people rests the fate of millions."

But the organization of which Mr. Wallace is head approaches only the fringe of the problem. Hoover, who probably is more aware of its urgency than any other man, declared at Cairo that the world could surmount the difficulties of the next four months only by reduction of consumption in those countries which could do so.

"The only bright spot in the crisis," he added, "is that we know it will be over in the first days of September, when the harvest season begins. But until then no efforts should be spared to rescue the millions who are starving."

From WASHINGTON, too, came a statement by British officials that no immediate relief was expected on whether the new U.S. wheat conservation measures were sufficient to allow Britain to contribute the offered 200,000 tons of cereal to the general pool.

Meanwhile, according to B.U.P. correspondents at Rhine Army headquarters, the German Government has ordered "Stalin's laboratory" for the greatest mass endurance test the world has ever known.

CRIM PICTURES
From Hamburg, one of the black spots of hungry Germany, came yesterday the following statement from a medical officer:

"The Germans are 60 days from starvation. It is doubtful whether in two months time they will be able to do any hard work at all. This stage will be followed by a period of extreme weakness and later on, theoretically at least—by infantile mortality is three times that of Britain. Old people, too, are dying in great numbers."

An equally grim picture came yesterday from Italy. A spokesman of the UNRRA stated that there was no hope of the world being able to maintain the 7,000 daily bread ration for 10 days.

Special attention is being held this week-end by UNRRA officials and members of the Italian Government to discuss the grave situation.

A reduction in the bread ration to a little over five ounces daily is likely, but imported grain will be needed even to maintain that figure.

Strike Stops Our Danish Bacon
The last consignment of bacon is to be shipped from Denmark to England tonight by the mail steamer Eden.

Further export is impossible till the strike of meat workers is settled.

V-DAY SHIP BRINGING FOOD
When the Australian cruiser Shropshire left Melbourne for the Australian continent by the London Victory Fairs, her cargo included 2,000 cases of food for Britain.

POPE BLAMES MORALS
Rome, Saturday.
TWO HUNDRED delegates of Italian Catholics Action were told today that millions of children were in danger of starvation.

"God knows how deeply we are concerned with their fate," he added. "Nevertheless, the deplorable situation threatening Italy and the world is but a pale reflection of the incomparably more dismal situation of the millions of children who are starving."

"We shall not fail in denouncing at every opportunity at least the most serious forms which cause so many victims—divorce, a Godless school, and the licence of improper cinema and public performances"—Reuter.

LORD LEVERBROOK HOME
Lord Leverbrouck, who has been on a five-week tour of the world, arrived at Hurn airport, Southampton, last night by air, looking bronzed and fit.

For London Housewife

'Moggy' Has Her Dream Home Now

"MOGGY" has got her dream home at last.

"Moggy" was the nickname by which Mrs. Elizabeth Bergewick, thirty-five-year-old wife of a soldier and mother of a five-year-old girl, was known in the Silverton soap factory where she worked.

She used it as a non-descript name for a sweepstake ticket which she bought months ago with 10s. she saved from her wages.

The ticket has brought her £25,000.

She had not told her husband, and had forgotten all about it until she received a telegram.

Mrs. Bergewick's new home is at Romford, Essex.

Filibuster Attacks Loan

Washington, Saturday.

THE Senate debate on the British loan appears to have introduced a first-class filibuster in William Langer, who continued to hold the floor with his attack on the loan.

"There's a lot of money involved," said Langer, "and it deserves all the attention I am willing to give it."

Langer, who has been speaking since Wednesday, and will return to the floor on Monday.

Italy Yanks In Frontier Fight

AMERICANS in light tanks and jeeps, armed with machine-guns, supported the Italian police in a Yugoslav-Italian frontier clash at Caporetto, about 40 miles north of Trieste, which broke during the night and ended at 2 p.m. yesterday, Milan Radio reported.

Apparently a police post was attacked with firearms, and the Italian police, but four of the attackers were left on the ground, the Radio added.—Reuter.

Moscow Churches Packed For Easter

Moscow, Saturday.
Easter services in Moscow to-day were attended by 1,000,000 people, according to Greek Orthodox priests.

Moscow congregations have swelled during the week. Last year was the largest since the Revolution.—A.P.

LORD LASCELLES
Columbia, Saturday.

Three-year-old eldest son of the Princess Royal and Earl of Harewood, arrived in Vancouver today for a brief visit on "personal business"—Reuter.

'Leathering' Is Cure

"THE courts are now being crowded with kids like you. I have got to administer the law, but if from day to day some of you got a darned good leathering it would do you good."

This was the view expressed by Mr. Rowland Thomas, K.C., the oldest magistrate, when four youths appeared before him yesterday on a charge of breaking into a pawnbroker's shop.

"Help your people at home instead of starting a life of crime," Mr. Thomas continued. "There is nothing other about."

THE KING AND THE PRINCESS AT HURST PARK

Here on the horsey hum of voices hushes, and every eye follows the half dozen dogs which catapult from the traps. £40,000 can change hands in just over thirty seconds running time. £300,000 is often wagered in an evening.

It surprises even me where all the money comes from," said Dave, the tic-tac man, as he drew off his white gloves and put away his glasses at the end of his 1,248th successive dog meeting.

He was thinking, doubtless, of the £200,000,000 which, it is estimated, was spent at the dogs last year, and more significantly, perhaps, of that tidal-wave of unbridled betting money which pours through the fingers of the bookmakers and clogs the Tote forecasters' windows.

For Dave is the gambler's grapevine. His mastery of the short-hand of the stadium, the sign language of the quick-retort, for his wit and sports a long, rakish roadster—Dave, who knows them all.

CASCADE OF CASH FOR 'THE DOGS'

Of all the fantastic pictures of life in post-war London, none is so sinister as that drawn by our special investigator after spending nights at the greyhound tracks. Summing up the betting craze, he says: "There is so much crooked money about that the crooks themselves don't know what to do with it."

£500,000 Bets In A Night

By "PEOPLE" STAFF REPORTER ALAN HOBY

LONDON is the mug's mecca. Here, in the garish, green-gold half-world of the dog tracks, this cock-eyed city's frantic fever of gambling reaches its apex. Here, while the betting boys, worn and weary, stare at the greyhound tracks. Summing up the betting craze, he says: "There is so much crooked money about that the crooks themselves don't know what to do with it."
